Sgt. Gilbert Padilla, a ground guide with the 1st Bn, 77th FA, motions the driver of an M109A6 Paladin onto a train headed southbound for the Grafenwoehr training facility. A miscalculation, a miscue or a breakdown in communication could result in a turned vehicle. Rail head operations require surgical accuracy, patience and the icy nerves of a tight-rope walker.

Load train to train for 1st Bn, 77th FA

By Nathan Van Schaik

Soldiers with the 1st Battalion, 77th Field Artillery Regiment, 172nd Heavy Infantry Brigade Combat Team lined up their vehicles on a train headed southbound for the Grafenwoehr training area, Monday, August 10 at the rail head on Conn Barracks.

The mobilization of troops and equipment to training grounds in Grafenwoehr is not an indication that the battalion is preparing to deploy, according to the battalion's commander, Lt. Col. Christopher J. Cardoni.

"We're not training for a theater type mission," he said.

Idling your vehicle

The garrison policy on the reduction of the impact from vehicle usage on the environmental prohibits the idling of vehicles. When waiting for the light at the Conn East gate, for example, turn off your car. You can reduce unnecessary and avoidable air pollution and fuel consumption. More...
